

Regency England 1811-1820

Mary Jo Putney on Regency Romance popularity: "It was the dawn of the modern age, where revolutions and industrial change were creating the society we recognize now... It was also an age of wonderful writers, like Jane Austen and the Romantic poets. At the same time, the Regency is distant enough to have glamour...dashing carriages. No powdered wigs...rather, women wore graceful Empire styles... It was the Napoleonic period, where there was war...(that) gives the opportunity for wonderful, dashing soldier and spy heroes, and sometimes heroines, too.
